

Pop Punk / Indie Rock from Lisbon by way of Los Angeles

ABOUT THE SONG

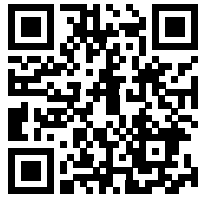

"Wasting My Life Away" is an introspective anthem about the battle for sobriety — the feeling of being stuck in a loop, fighting to find meaning while the world keeps spinning. Driven by soaring guitars, raw emotion, and an infectious chorus, it captures the modern pop-punk revival's heart while delivering a deeply personal message.

"I wrote 'Wasting My Life Away' while getting sober — it's about clawing my way back to something real, even when I felt trapped in the chaos."

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Kicked Out of the Sky is the solo project of Matt Bachman (guitar, vocals). Formed in Los Angeles, California in 2020 and now based in Lisbon, Portugal, the project blends emotional storytelling with high-energy pop-punk and indie rock influences. Matt's music channels the golden era of 2000s punk while embracing the cinematic production of today's indie scene.
